SLAYER'S 'CHARMED LIFE' NEARS GRIM ENDING

has left Governor Harold G. Hoffman an excuse for another eleventh-hour reprieve.

Meanwhile, the Rev. D. G. Werner, spiritual adviser to the doomed man, before leaving New York for Trenton, expressed belief Hauptmann would not die tonight.

After answering a telephone call, Mr. Werner said: "I've just got good news. That was Governor Hoffman on the phone. I do not think Bruno will die tonight."

Hauptmann is doomed to die at 8 o'clock and final preparations for his execution have been made.

Colonel Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the New Jersey state prison, paid a visit to the office of Attorney General David T. Wilentz shortly before noon for the purpose of clarifying the situation, as far as his part in carrying out the execution is concerned.

Meantime, the Hauptmann defense sent a desperate appeal for a new grand jury investigation of the Wendel charges in Hunterdon county.

C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense counsel, was said to have sent a telegram to Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard demanding a Hunterdon county grand jury be convened to consider the Wendel case, and that Hunterdon county prosecutor, Anthony M. Hauck, be superseded by a special prosecutor.

Fisher also sent a telegram to Hauck, asking him to convene a grand jury.

Bruno, Prepared, Waits Chair Tonight

By WIN BROOKS

Boston Evening American Staff Writer

Trenton, N. J., April 3.—Omen of Death, perhaps replacing a symbol of shame, the Black Flag flies again today for Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Tonight, at 8, he will die in the electric chair for the nation's vilest crime—Governor Harold G. Hoffman willing.

Twice before a wheaky whirling of mad political maneuvering snatched him back from the start of the last short shuffle. But his few friends, found in funny places, are no longer swinging on the clapper of the curfew bell and chanting: "Bruno shall not die tonight."

Bruno will die tonight unless Governor Hoffman, the court tossed right back into his lap, intervenes again.

Col. Mark Kimberling, chief keeper at the prison, is going

Ellis Parker's Suspect and Jury That Failed to Render a Verdict

No action in the matter of an indictment against Paul H. Wendel was taken by the Mercer County grand jury investigating his reputed kidnapping confession. Nothing now lies between Bruno and the electric chair except unprecedented intervention by Governor Hoffman. Jury is shown here on steps of courthouse during a recess.

with his plans for the execution.

PREPARED FOR CHAIR

Soon after arising at 9 a. m. Hauptmann again went through the ordeal of being "prepared" for the chair. His head was shaved for the second time this week, he was given clean clothes and transferred from his old cell number nine next to the death chamber.

The governor's efforts to save Hauptmann after the kidnapping murder of the Lindbergh baby had been pinned on Paul H. Wendel, disbarred Trenton attorney, came to nothing at midnight, abruptly but not altogether in the nature of a surprise.

With the hand of public opinion and his own conscience heavy upon the bridge, Mercer County's runaway grand jury was brought to a sudden halt, tossing its rider.

The preposterous proceeding, persisting to the tipping stage for 32 hours, came crashing down at last—and there was a mad rush for the nearest exit.

By a vote of 13 to 8, some of his own political parties joining in the repudiation of the Governor, the grand jury voted to discontinue the Wendel inquiry.

This is it expected to report to the court today.

It was explained that the jury might have voted a "no-bill" except for the fact that the complaint and commitment papers of the case were not available. They had not been received from the justice of the peace before whom Wendel was arraigned last Saturday night.

This tied the hands of the jury. They could take no formal action without these documents.

Out of the window went the charges against Wendel, selected by the Governor's private investigators on the basis of a confession alleged to have been obtained by torture, as the fill-in man for Hauptmann.

Ended without the indictment that would have delayed indefinitely the electrocution of Hauptmann was the grand jury's consideration of the charge that Wendel killed the first-born of Anne Lindbergh.

The decision, confirmed in its first announcements, clarified later by the individual jurors, removed every obstacle from the announced intention of Warden Kimberling to send Hauptmann to the chair tonight.

"Hauptmann will be electrocuted tonight unless something unforeseen happens," Kimberling announced.

"I did not want to execute one man while there was a possibility of another being indicted for the same crime. I talked to the grand jury foreman today and he said the jury will not request a further stay."

Back into the lap of Jersey's edgy governor was tossed the full responsibility for any further stay of justice.

What will he do with it?

"There will be a statement from the governor later in the day," was the word from his office.

LIMIT REACHED

A few believe Governor Hoffman will again interfere with the sentence of the court. Many believe he has reached his limit.

So utterly confounding are the various phases of the history-eyed case that any positive prediction Hauptmann will be alive to-morrow, regardless of logic, would be a challenge flung in the face of impunity.

It was more than two months ago that I wrote from here that anything fantastic might happen at any moment.

That is just as true as these apparent last hours of the holy slayer. The more fantastic still may happen.

HOFFMAN SCALP SOUGHT

The press is beating the to-morrow again for Governor Hoffman's scalp.

If now he announces a final conviction, that Hauptmann should pay the penalty, his own friends declare he still has a chance of regaining the prestige he has sacrificed since the turn of the year.

But before eight tonight, his own friends now say, he must make the choice—definite sacrifice of his own career by further prolongation of Hauptmann's life—or sacrifice of that life.

In the jury's decision to toss the case against Wendel out the window, foreman Alayne Freeman, close friend and political associate of the Governor, had no vote.

One of the 13 jurors who voted Hauptmann's down charged that a clique on the jury sought to hold out for a continued investigation that would require days, perhaps weeks.

Any such continuance beyond midnight of Saturday, demanding as it would have a further reprieve, would have pushed Hauptmann's fate into a very dubious background.

Indeed, it seemed for hours during yesterday and the early evening that a complete survey of the Wendel case was in progress by the jury, this, insofar as the minority could wobble it, was actually the case.

TURN IN THE TIDE

But in the evening there was a turn in the tide and Wendel, brought over from the jail to tell his own bizarre tale of being abducted in New Jersey, tortured into a "confession," lodged in a lonely house until the dramatic last moment—Wendel avenged the proceedings away from the ridiculous.

First announcements were confused and merely to the effect that the jury had voted, 13 to 8, to end its consideration of the case and not to reconvene until Tuesday.

It was a wild, merry-go-round day with first Hoffman before the jury, then Attorney-General David T. Wilentz, arch foe of Hoffman and Hauptmann, then the man, Wendel.

In between were sandwiched a few minor witnesses who had to do with Wendel's stay in a home for feeble-minded and waiting were a host of others, among them the Hawkshaw, Ellis Parker, Hoffman investigator who produced Wendel as the key to the crime.

BATTLE CUBOUS CROWD

Twice he has been ready to die and has adjusted himself mentally to go to his doom, twice he has been snatched back from the brink of eternity.

Alternate hope and alternate hopelessness have tortured him. This is a punishment more agonizing than the swift death of the chair. He is depressed, downcast and ready to break again.

Twice he has started the last shroud and the third time . . . The third time . . .

Taken before the grand jury as a witness because "God had summoned him."

The police, tempers were a trifle thin, were not in sympathy. He had hardly been escorted to a cell when the rumor spread that Charles Ross had been found and had confessed the crime.

Many in the waiting crowd who received the device anonymous to testify was not permitted to tell his story.

"God told me," he said. The name of the side-tracked witness was George (Bob) Miller.

"God told me Bruno Hauptmann was an innocent man," he told Sergeant Charles Miller.

The report was unconvincing. And a little while later the jury expressed itself as unconvinced by the evidence against Wendel and so doomed Hauptmann.

Hauptmann's third "last goodbye" to his wife has been said. Under prison regulations are waived for him Governor Hoffman again grants reprieve—he will not again see the wife who has remained loyal to him since his arrest.

Since his conviction, he has no hope, no vision. Psychologists profess to believe this is significant. Head shaved, right trouser leg slit for the electric chair, he transferred again from his regular cell in the death house to the jumping off cell next to the door of the chamber.

Miss Amelia Earhart, the flier, wants Governor Hoffman to use the "truth" test drive on Hauptmann, a drug supposed to compel confession.

Charles Darrow, criminal lawyer, tells Hoffman, Hauptmann must have another trial. Mauros, the French writer, says it would be atrocious cruelty to execute Hauptmann now after three reprieves. Everybody has an opinion. The public executioner thinks there should be some limit to his disapprobation.

The Canadian Press news service says Canada's wealth has shrunk almost six thousand million dollars since 1929. That will be only a temporary shrinkage.

Nobody can estimate the wealth of such a land as Canada. The estimate of thirty-one billion total wealth is ridiculously low. If Canada's government went gold hunting on its own account, as the Russian government does, it might soon accumulate more than thirty-one billion of precious metals.

The wealth of such a country is beyond estimation.

BOSTON'S TAX BILL SPEEDED

The bill abolishing the Boston tax limit and limiting the Boston public school appropriation to $16,372,800 for this year was ordered to a third reading today by the Senate. It has already passed the House.

Senator Joseph C. White of Jamaica Plain, chairman of the special legislative commission that recommended the legislation, offered an amendment, agreeable to Mayor Mansfield and the school committee.

It provides that under the school appropriation section of the bill, the mayor, on request of the school committee, be empowered to recommend, and the city council to pass, additional appropriations for school purposes. The amendment was adopted on voice vote.

Lamson Murder Charge Dismissed

San Jose, Cal., April 3 (AP)—Wife murder charges against David A. Lamson were dismissed today by a judge.

Dismissed Attorney Fred Moore personally asked Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco to dismiss the charges, saying it was impossible to obtain a jury to convict Lamson, former Stanford University press executive, convicted at his first trial for slaying his young wife, Allene Thorpe Lamson, and sentenced to hang. He was granted two new trials and the juries disagreed.

IN BRUNO'S
DESTINY

Wife's Farewell

Fisher Demands New Grand Jury Probe

Trenton, N. J., April 3 (AP)—Huntern County Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., said today that C. Lloyd Fisher, counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, had demanded that he convene the grand jury to consider kidnap charges against Paul H. Wendel, disbarred Trenton attorney.

Hauck said he would confer with Attorney-General David T. Wilentz, associated with him in the prosecution of Hauptmann, who is sentenced to die tonight.

Fisher expressed the belief, Hauck said, that Wendel might be guilty of kidnapping the Lindbergh baby. "That crime," he wired Hauck, "occurred admittedly in Hunterdon county."

ASKS STAY

Hauck said that Fisher's telegram to him also asked that he join with the defense attorney in requesting a stay of execution for Hauptmann.

The stay, Fisher suggested, should be for such a time as the Hunterdon grand jury might require to investigate fully the kidnapping.

The Hunterdon grand jury returned the indictment on which Hauptmann was convicted.

The Mercer county grand jury last night discontinued its investigation of a murder charge against Wendel in connection with the kidnapping.

ATTORNEY HIT

The jurisdiction of the Mercer grand jury was challenged by Attorney-General Wilentz, as well as Wendel's counsel, who pointed out that the kidnapping "confession" of Wendel upon which the investigation was based indicated that the child died several weeks after the kidnapping and from an accidental fall from bed.

The theory thus was expressed that no murder charge would hold against Wendel.

Hauptmann's indictment and conviction for the murder were based on the fact that the state proved the satisfaction of the jury that the child died during commission of the kidnapping felony.

CRIME SCENE

Fisher, referring to the Lindbergh crime, wired Hauck:

"That crime occurred admittedly in Hunterdon county. No grand jury other than Hunterdon could have or could have authority to investigate the kidnapping."

He demanded that you immediately return an indictment against person perpetrating it.

He demanded that you immediately call a grand jury to consider the Wendel case.

He ended by his own statement involved himself in the crime—ending investigation by the Hunterdon grand jury, I urge you to join me in requesting a stay of Hauptmann's execution until such time as the Hunterdon grand jury can reach a determination.

Hunterdon and Mercer counties adjoin. The Lindbergh estate is East Amwell township, Hunterdon, while the body of the kidnapped baby was found just over the line in Mercer. The state contended that death occurred while the kidnaper was still on the estate.

Richmond Visit of 'Jafsie' Probed

Richmond, Va., April 3 (INS)—Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon spent the night of Dec. 10, 1934, in a garage here, sleeping in his car, and recently a mysterious "investigator" was here checking up on the visit, operators of the garage said today.

The two garage operators, James Perrin and John E. Billey, declared Dr. Condon at the time told them his automobile was full of "valuable papers," and that two men who accompanied him stayed in the Council and Millers hotel nearby.

On the hotel registration card of the pair accompanying Dr. Condon, made out in the name of Milton Page, 34 Bay street, City Island, New York, was written—"assisting Jafsie."

Perrin and Billey added that the unknown "investigator" came here Wednesday, and when advised that Condon had been there, said that was the information he sought.

The garage operators said the "investigator" intimated he was working on a theory that the supposedly murdered Lindbergh baby might be still alive.

Five concerns had accented the union demands at 3 a. m.

Two hours later two more had agreed to the wage increases and at 6:30 a. m. the Whiting Milk Company, largest concern affected, accepted the union demands.

Fear of an impasse in settlement developed when President Joseph Willmann of the Whiting Company, in a counter move, threatened to close his plant, throwing 100 employees out of work, unless strikers returned to work before 5 p. m.

He arrived here from New York by plane soon after 8 a. m.

OTHER SIGNERS

He agreed to the wage demands of the drivers. It is understood when informed that all other concerns had agreed to increases.

In addition to the Whiting Company, those affected by the short strike were: Herby Brothers, Somerville; Seven Oaks Farm, Somerville; J. E. McDame, Lynn and Chelsea; J. F. Cushman Company, and William B. Driscoll & Sons, both of South Boston; Martin F. BRUNO EXPECTS TO SEE HER ONCE MORE

Trenton, N. J., April 3 (INS)—In the early hours of today, Anna Hauptmann, the woman who never lost faith, heard once more the sad news that her husband must die: that all hope was gone.

She pulled the door of her hotel room partly open to hear that the Mercer County grand jury had made her husband's execution almost inevitable by refusing to indict Paul Wendel for the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

She stood there, ghostlike in her pajamas, awaying unsteadily, as though she heard but could not comprehend what was being said. Then she let out an agonized wail that was almost like the rattle of death itself in its pitiless intensity.

"Ach mein Richard, mein liebe Richard!" she exclaimed. "Ach, Gott! How can they do this?"

Direct Primary Defeated in R. I.

Providence, R. I., April 3.—There will be no direct primary act in Rhode Island.

The state Senate by a vote of 27 to 14 rejected the plan for the direct primary introduced by Lieutenant Governor Robert E. Quinn and Senator Francis J. Kierstead.

Too Cold

Sussex, N. J., April 3 (AP).—Betty Stevens, 18, walked out of the woods and told a group of men grapping for her body in a lake she had decided not to drown herself because the water was "too cold."

The men were grapping after Betty's mother told Police Chief Thomas Trechman the girl threatened suicide after a disappointment in love.

Senate Votes Shop Closing Over Veto

Retail stores throughout Massachusetts must remain closed until after 1 p. m. on Columbus Day beginning this year.

By a vote of 50 to 2, the state Senate enacted a law over Governor Curley's veto that brings October 12 within the Sunday closing law.

SOVIET REGIME 'HORROR,' SAYS REFUGEE

Horror endured by a Christian minister and his family under the Soviet regime in Russia will be told in Tremont Temple Sunday afternoon by Paul Voronoff, young Russian, whose parents are now in a Siberian concentration camp.

Young Voronoff, 24 years old, arrived in the United States nine months ago after his two brothers paid a ransom for his release from a concentration camp.

Since his arrival he has been making a lecture tour through the United States under the sponsorship of the Association of Christian Youth Movement.

"LIVING HELL" CITED

Voronoff, son of missionary parents claims to have passed through a "living hell" in four Soviet prison camps because of his religious convictions.

Almost unbelievable tales of the fifth and sixth in these camps and treatment of prisoners will be related by the young Russian.

Voronoff scoffed at the boasted Soviet prison reforms.

"They say there are no iron bars in Soviet Russia," he said.

"The last time I saw my mother and father they were behind bars, sentenced to eight years in Siberia without trial, ignorant of the crime of which they are charged."

SUFFERING DESCRIBED

"It is impossible to exaggerate the suffering of the millions of Christians who are compelled to live under the hammer and sickle. The conditions are intolerable which have been created by the dictatorship of the proletariat."

Young Voronoff said he helped bury hundreds of victims of famine in Russia's most fertile agricultural section as late as 1923.

With his young brother and sister, he said he lived on bread made from carrots and pumpkins, and frozen beet roots. They had been deprived of food cards because of his father's religious activities.

LETTERS RESTRICTED

His father and mother are allowed to write a letter to their children once in two months.

Since Voronoff's arrival in the United States he has made all lectures and has also written a book depicting the horrors under the Soviet regime.

His lectures are illustrated with slides and pictures smuggled out of his native country. On Monday evening Voronoff will speak at Park Street Baptist Church.

'RED' RIVAL

Paul Voronoff bemoans his parents' plight, held in a Siberian prison camp. The young Russian was ransomed from a similar imprisonment by two brothers in this country.

TOLL OF AUTOS SOARS TO 50

Greater Boston auto fatalities this year increased to 50 today with the death at Chelsea Memorial Hospital of Edward J. McEachern, 25, of Central Avenue, Boston.

McEachern was the driver of a taxi cab which crashed into a wet rail on Everett avenue, Chelsea, early Saturday morning.

The condition of Lewis Marder, 50, of Grove street, West End, an accountancy instructor in a Boston school, who was a passenger in McEachern's cab, still critical. His right leg has been amputated. McEachern's death was due to a fractured skull.

Curly to Hang Low From Easter Hats

There will be plenty of curly tresses hanging below feminine hats in the Easter parade. At least, that is what members of the Massachusetts Hairdressers' Association were told by Miss Eva Rubin at their annual convention in the Statler Hotel.

75 Parents Replace Sons At Harvard

In a novel three-day undertaking, 75 fathers and mothers of Harvard University undergraduates today replaced their sons for a modern taste of college life.

While their sons and other students enjoyed the annual spring vacation, this latest group of "freshmen" took over Lowell House. They slept in their sons' rooms, ate in the house dining halls, lounge in the common rooms, and exercise in the indoor athletic building.

They are under direction of Professor and Mrs. Julian Lowell Cook, who has arranged a program, including a series of lectures on "Manuscript Hunting in Asia and Europe," "Adventure in the Near East," and "Timing the Universe."

Unlike their sons, the "students," some of whom are having their first taste of college life, will have no examinations to worry about, no books to carry, no degrees and no graduation. The only requisite is a $5 a day tax added to their sons' term bill.

Escorts Pal Dead In Mountain Fall

Gorham, N. H., April 3.—McKin Deisingerfield, Princeton student, who plunged 200 feet over the precipice of a ledge at Turnman's ravine, near Mt. Washington summit, and is alive to tell about it, will accompany the body of his chum John Winthrop Fowler, killed in the same plunge, in New York late this afternoon.

Fowler, son of Dr. Robert H. Fowler, of New York, sustained a skull fracture when his head struck a rock at the bottom of the ravine. He had lain unconscious beside Deisingerfield, throughout Tuesday night. He was alive when a rescue party, warned of his plight by Deisingerfield, reached him yesterday, but he died shortly after.

DUCE'S TROOPS REACH SHORE OF LAKE TANA

Rome, April 3 (AP)—The first Italian troops have reached Lake Tana, headquarters of the Blue Nile and center of British interests in Ethiopia, an informed source said today.

The Fascist forces pushed on toward Lake Tana, this source said, after occupying Gondar, the important Ethiopian city 30 miles north of the strategic lake.

Officials emphasized, in connection with the occupation of the Tana sector, west of the main northern battleground, that Premier Mussolini's guarantee not to admit British interests still held good.

Selassie's Troops Again Defeated

Addis Ababa, April 3 (AP)—Turning angrily upon the Italian forces dogging their retreat, the Imperial Guard Troops of Emperor Haile Selassie have suffered their second defeat within six days, dispatches from the front said today.

Italian losses—set at 7,000 in Tuesday's battle—were again heavy in the second encounter, which occurred Wednesday.

Twenty white Italian soldiers and four Askaris (Africans) were killed and many Askaris wounded.

When the Emperor's men made a tentative counter-attack, the Menon Pass against the Askaris, Italian Alpine troops rushed to their rescue and crushed the attempt.

Colson, Maine Man, May Be Peace Envoy

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

London, April 3.—Direct Italian-Ethiopian peace negotiations may be suggested, informed sources said, by the departure from Addis Ababa today of Everett A. Colson, former Haile Selassie's most trusted and most important adviser.

The shrewd Maine Yankee who has guided Ethiopia's foreign affairs for six years announced at Addis Ababa that he was going to Egypt with Mrs. Colson on "sick leave"—but that he intended to remain in the service of the government during that leave.

"I hope to return soon," Colson asserted.

He left Addis Ababa only a week after the departure of Francis M. Bickert, British oil promoter who negotiated a concession in Ethiopia, later abandoned by the American interests involved.

Easter Baskets for 1000 Children

Through the combined efforts of the Junior American Red Cross and Boston kindergarten children, more than a thousand young patients in Boston hospitals will be greeted Easter morning with a surprise basket. Little Shirley Lish (left) and Ruth Mullenwey are shown with just a few of the baskets and toys which the pupils have made.

More than 1000 children patients in various hospitals in the Greater Boston area will be made happy on Easter Sunday morning through the cooperation of children attending kindergarten schools in the City of Boston and the Junior American Red Cross.

During the past month over 1000 kindergarten pupils under the direction of Miss Lillian B. Poor, director of Kindergarten schools, of the Boston School Department, have been busily engaged making Easter baskets.

The baskets have been filled with toys, candy, picture books, and other little things that go to make sick youngsters happy.

During the past week the motor corps of the Junior Red Cross, under the guidance of Mrs. Henry R. Scott, director of the Metropolitan Chapter, have been collecting the baskets from the 700 kindergarten schools in the city.

The baskets were today delivered to the Boston School Department where they will be sorted and assigned to the various hospitals where children are confined. The Red Cross will make the deliveries next week.

Making Easter baskets for sick children has been an annual event, but this year's collection has been the greatest in many years, according to Miss Poor.

"The Easter basket collection for sick children who are unable to enjoy the privileges of other children has proven a great success," declared Mrs. Scott.

"The kindergarten children under their best efforts into their work."

Under the guidance of their teachers they have produced hundreds of articles that will be appreciated by the sick youngsters.

"Although their ages are between four and five they have made beautiful doll houses, dollhouse furniture and toys out of ordinary cardboard boxes."

4 Bands at Egg Hunt

More good news today for the members of the Boston Evening American Secret Agent X-9 Club who plan to attend the annual Easter Egg Hunt at Franklin Park April 11.

Four bands, composed of young boys and girls, have been promised by American Legion Posts and churches to furnish the music for the affair.

And of course, there will be the great Red Sox duffer, Jimmy Fox, and the funny man of the Yawkeymen, Al Schacht, and Manager Joe Cronin among a host of others who will attend the affair.

Governor Curley will be there, with his daughter, Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, Mayor and Mrs. Blaine F. Parker, Commissioner William F. Long, and many, many other notables.

But that isn't all, not by a long shot. To every member of the X-9 Club who attends the hunt will go an unforgettable day in their lives. Now prices than ever before.

To the member who finds the Golden Egg will go first prize of $15, and $10 will be awarded to the finder of the Silver Egg.

The hunt starts promptly at 10 a. m. Easter Saturday morning April 11 at the bandstand which will be erected on the Playfield at Franklin Park.

Remember, however, that you must be a member of the Secret Agent X-9 Club in order to take part in the Egg Hunt, and that you must have both your badge and membership card with you.

If you are not now a member of the club, write your name, street number, city or town and age on a piece of plain paper, and enclose five cents to cover handling of the badge and card.

KISSABLE LIPS? JUST CHILL 'EM!

Hollywood, Cal., April 3 (INS)—Granting that kisses are a requisite of love, or just a pleasant pastime, here is some great news for girls who want to be kissed but aren't.

"Don't mind here and there, to decide, but thoroughly chilled Cupid's how attract the boys."

All that advice comes from an expert, Jack Dawe, chief cosmetician at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. He doesn't speak from kissing experience, but from advising film stars how to care for their lips so that all the world (at least figuratively) would like to kiss them.

Here are Dawe's secrets, as revealed today to International News Service.

1—Ice-cube massages morning and night to keep lips firm, increase circulation and obtain an alluring natural foundation color.

2—Don't bite or moisten the lips.

3—Whistle for five minutes each day, aids in shaping mouth.

4—Don't smile, yawn, or stuff drooping corners of mouth.

5—Cover lips with pomade in sun and wind.

6—Remove lipstick at night, choose a shade of lipstick that matches the natural red of your lips; apply this rouge with a fine camel's hair brush before powdering, following at all times the natural lines of the lips; never build them up or down.

Dawe names Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy, Virginia Bruce and Jeanette MacDonald as perfect examples of "kissable lips."

"Any girl who will follow my rules," he said, "can attain perfection in lip beauty."

Landon Club Enrolls

Foes of Raw Deal Call Parley

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

In the interest of further extending the enrollment of Republicans, independents and the considerable block of Democrats opposed to the Raw Deal in the Landon for President Club of Massachusetts, a meeting of Republican members of the legislature publicly on record for the Kansas governor will be held next Tuesday in the Hotel Bellevue.

The get-together will take place between the hours of 3 and 5 p. m. and short addresses will be made by President Edwin E. Parker of the club, former Lieutenant Governor Charles G. Bacon, Governor's Councilor Winifred A. Schuster and other speakers.

More than 50 legislators have been made official Landon leaders in their respective communities. Reports of progress will be received.

At the club headquarters in room 380, Parker House, applications for enrollment continue to indicate the wide popularity of the Kansas Governor and the steadily growing belief that in his candidacy lies the Republicans' "best bet" to oust the Democratic national administration.

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Active campaigning is taking place in several of the congressional districts where Landon plates of candidates for delegates and alternates to the C. O. P. national convention have been put in the field against candidates who have declined to inform the voters of their presidential preferences.

Because of the fact that the delegate candidacy of National Committeeman John Richardson of Canton in the 12th district, an intimate of former President Herbert Hoover, is being challenged by one of these Landon aites, the contest there is attracting more than state-wide attention.

Opposed to the group headed by Richardson are Representative Charles W. Hedges of Quincy, Court Clerk George C. P. Olson of Rockton, as delegate candidates, and Mildred W. Rander of Dedham and Representative Henry P. McLaren of Westwood as alternates.

LANDON SENTIMENT

In the numerous gatherings held by this popular group of voters, flattering evidence of almost universal sentiment for Landon is reported.

Another group of Landon supporters that is alarming the "machine manipulators" of the C. O. P. is in the ninth congressional district where Colin MacLeod of Brookline and Mrs. Belle Maguire of Cambridge are teamed up with Mrs. Elizabeth A. Peckin and Edward Hutton, Jr. of Wellesley.

All four are prominent in their section and are waging a spirited campaign. The battle here may become bitter in the event that faction underrated to be under discussion by the hand-picked Richardson aites are attempted.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

An important part of the educational work being carried on by the Landon for President Club is that of informing the various Republican organizations, especially the women's clubs, of the opportunity that will be theirs in the April 28 primary of writing in the name of Governor Alfred M. Landon as their preference for President.

President Parker is impressing upon all Landon workers that enrollment in the "Landon for President Club of Massachusetts" in no way places members under finan-

BILLS BY PLANE TO PRESIDENT

Among the bills the President will sign is the extension for one year of authority for the Federal Housing Administration to guarantee private loans and mortgages for home repair and alteration. This provision of the Federal Housing Act expired Wednesday.

The following message from the President was received here today: "Excellent fishing at Green bay where many varieties were caught. Moved today to Middle Night, Andros Island, where we will await mail and try bone fishing."

ALBERTA REFUND BILL SPEEDED

Edmonton, Alta., April 3 (AP)—Compulsory conversion into low-interest bonds of Alberta's $100,000,000 public debt drew closer today as the legislation moved into the committee stage of passage through the provincial legislature.

The refunding bill, sponsored by Premier William Aberhart's social credit government, is expected to receive third reading and royal assent by Tuesday. It will then become law, but under the terms of the drastic bill it will be effective only upon proclamation of the provincial cabinet. The proclamation is expected quickly to follow, in view of the social crediters' battle with the Dominion government and the province's default of a $3,200,000 bond maturity last Wednesday.

MILLIONS OWED IN U. S.
The provincial debt to the Dominion is $28,000,000. At least 25 per cent of the $100,000,000 funded debt is represented by securities held in the United States, many by small investors, it was revealed today.

The measure empowers the Social Credit Government, swept into power seven months ago on a platform promising every Albertan a monthly social credit "dividend" payment of $25, to redeem any security it desires with the non-maturing provincial stock and to pay whatever interest it desires on the stock providing that interest is at least 2 1/2 per cent. No maximum interest rate is specified. The House Liberal party yesterday lost a bitter fight to specify a maximum interest rate of 3 per cent.

The Liberals also lost a battle to insert in the measure a clause providing that compulsory conversion of any outstanding security should not be made except in the case of a financial crisis, that the measure should be invoked only as a last resort.

STILL SEEKS LOAN
As written, the bill gives the Social Credit government unprecedented financial powers.

Any court action by holders of present provincial securities to compel the province to live up to its promises is outlawed by the legislation. The bill, Premier Aberhart, former school teacher and evangelist, declared today, will save the province $7000 a day in interest.

The social credit prophet revealed he still hopes to negotiate a bank loan to provide funds to meet the defaulted bond maturity, the first provincial default in Canadian history.

It was considered extremely unlikely, however, that a loan would be forthcoming, as the few overtures made by bankers have included the demand that the loan be secured by the Dominion government.

The Dominion government refused to lend funds to the province when Aberhart would not accede to the provision that he accept the supervision of the federal bank council over provincial finances. The same situation prevails in regard to Dominion guarantee of a bank loan.

TOWNSEND 'TIP'
WIDENS QUIZ

Washington, April 3 (AP)—A "hot tip" on the Townsend old age pension movement led House investigators to advance pursuit of the agency and speed their agents into the field today.

Chairman Bell (D., Missouri) of the House committee indicated hearings would not be resumed for ten days.

It was hinted that several regional and state area headquarters of Townsend were the immediate objectives of committee investigations.

Committee plans were upset as a result of testimony by John Bloodworth, accountant, that books of the Townsend organization were "muddled and confused."

"The books," said Bloodworth, "are reasonably accurate and complete only since July 1, 1935." James R. Sullivan, committee counsel, said he wanted to pursue further the testimony of Robert E. Clements, resigned national secretary, that $7000 was collected at a Townsend mass meeting in Los Angeles, February 20, but was not turned over to Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd. (the Townsend organization) nor recorded on its books.

Clements said he urged Dr. F. E. Townsend to turn the money over to the organization, but Dr. Townsend declined. Sullivan intimated Townsend "pocketed" the money.

Sheridan Downey, Dr. Townsend's personal counsel, told lawmakers the money was never in Dr. Townsend's possession. He explained the mass meeting was held to raise funds for a third party movement. The movement was abandoned, he said, and the money impounded, pending settlement.

The flames spread to the Ziegler kitchen and burned the rear of the house, besides threatening for a time to spread to other houses in the district, which is a thickly settled.

HITLER REFUSES BAN ON FORTS IN RHINELAND

BRUSSELS, April 3.—Hitler refused today to accept the demand of the League of Nations to ban German troops and military equipment from the Rhineland. The German government said it was ready to accept the ban only if it was accompanied by a similar ban on French troops and military equipment in the Rhineland.

The military convention which was signed at Locarno in 1924, and which provided for the demilitarization of the Rhineland, was the basis of the demand. The German government said it was ready to accept the ban only if it was accompanied by a similar ban on French troops and military equipment in the Rhineland.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

In these days, when the professional theater gives us next to nothing in the way of stimulating serious drama, and there is nothing to fall back upon except a Federal Theater project presenting "Valley Forge, or the Continental Had a Swear Word for It," or other grand bits of radical propaganda acted by earnest amateurs with at least a figurative Russian accent, may I direct your attention to a couple of amateur or semi-professional productions this week which look as if they might be well worth visiting?

This is hardly a reading notice next to advertising. I doubt that the advertising revenue from both combined would cause the business end of this paper to break out into ecstasies. But it is my own experience that usually I do not hear of these things until they are over, and then I kick myself at having missed them.

Since charity and due acknowledgment begin at home, let me mention first the performance being given this week-end by the Dramashop of Technology (occasionally and irreverently called the Dream Shop). The place is the cellar theater of the Architectural Department of Technology in the Rogers Building, opposite the Hotel Brunswick.

Trifle to Cozy Side But Very Atmospheric

When, some years ago, the old cellar of the Mining Lab was made over into a theater, I could not help exclaiming in Shakespearean fashion:

"Bottom! thou art translated, indeed."

But it really is a nice little theater—a trifle on the cozy side, but very atmospheric. There, on this and tomorrow evenings, the Dramashop—a voluntary organization of Tech men and girls under Professor Dean Fuller—is putting on a new and original translation (by a Tech student) of Gogol's "The Inspector General" (Revizor), the most famous comedy of the Russian theater. The piece was first produced on April 19, 1836, so this production is as near a centenary celebration as possible.

It dealt with bureaucratic incompetence and graft under the Czarist regime of Nicholas I. The story goes that the censor nearly had it withdrawn from the stage. But by some accident the Czar saw a performance. He laughed so uproariously at the dilemmas of his officers that there was nothing to be done about the piece, but let it play and become Russia's best beloved comedy.

May Find Both Well Worth Seeing

While this is going on, another organization called the Nell Gwynn Players—under the auspices of the Bishop-Lee school—is presenting for this Friday and Saturday afternoon and evening a modern French comedy, called "Noah," by a Frenchman named Andre Obey. Englished by Arthur Wilmut.

The play was done successfully in New York a season ago. The same season Katherine Cornell tried another piece by the same author—that ill-fated "Lucretia," which lasted only briefly. "Lucretia" dealt with the same theme as Shakespeare's long narrative poem of the same title. It did not go here.

But "Noah," which Obey had written for the celebrated Jacques Copeau's company of 15, fared better. It is a kind of French "The Green Pastures" and, it is said, the leading character of the first "Master Mariner" in literature is as rich and humorous and distinguished as "De Lawd" in Marc Connelly's famous piece. The company ought to do a good job on it, since it played last summer at the Nell Gwynn Theater at Malden Bridge, New York.

Edward Massey, very well known in Cambridge and Boston as dramatist, actor, director and producer, doubles in brass, not only directing, but playing the title role as well. So if you have seen the two New York ventures that adorn our boards, you may very well find either "The Inspector General" or "Noah"—or both—well worth seeing.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

A very interesting book could be written about the backyards of Boston. Some are beauty spots, and others are eyesores. Some support flowers and shrubs and greenery. Others sprout tin pans, ash cans, clotheslines and old clothes.

The members of various community garden clubs are planting now. The purpose is to show, by example, what may be done to beautify small open spaces. Beason Hill Garden Club is one of the most active. It has 45 members, mostly women. It is only eight years old, but it has transformed the appearance of entire streets, particularly the appearance of the countless alleys that give an unimproved rear view to the old mansions of the neighborhood. Next month, the annual two-day festival and flower show will be held, with gardens on the Hill opened for inspection. The admission fees go to the club.

Young Gardeners Know Their Onions

The club sponsors window boxes for school children, and offers prizes for the best exhibits every year. Mrs. Frank Bourne of Mt. Vernon street, who has a private garden, is a delight to the eye. She encourages children to garden on her vacant lot at the foot of Pine Street. One hundred boys and girls cultivate little plots in the spacious field. It is true that the little realists most of them poor, often prefer vegetables to blooms.

Prominent in the Beason Hill Garden Club are Mrs. L. Vernon Briggs, Mrs. Robert Cushman, Mrs. John Briggs Butler, Mrs. Eleanor Brigham, Mrs. William R. Snow, Mrs. Henry Tudor and Miss Francis Curtis.

Certainly the old timers who build Boston contemplated gardens. Most old houses, fronting directly on the sidewalk, have open spaces behind.

They were a fine body of men while they lasted, were Boston's Kentucky colonels. It's a pity to see them deprived of their commissions and reduced to the ranks.

Upward of a score of Boston journalists, business men, globe-trotters and admirers of the American thoroughbred, are affected by the decision of the attorney-general of Kentucky that such honorary titles are void.

In the golden days of Governor Ruby Lafont of Kentucky, he showered visitors to Churchill Downs with colonelcies and captaincies, and even more than a few of the few admirals of the non-aquatic Kentucky navy.

The demoted colon is of Boston are part of an army of 17,000 sumberrly adorned. The hard-bitten attorney-general seems to have stripped them of everything but their constitutional right to drown their sorrows in mint juleps!

Being Elected President Of U. S. Great Fun

Politics is the name of a new game giving Monopoly a run for its money. It is the brain child of Oswald Lord, graduate of Yale and New York textile man. It's put out by Parker Brothers in Salem.

With political tension high, the game is attracting attention everywhere, threatening to supplant other parlor pastimes and even cutting into the ranks of bridge addicts. It is played on a board map with a pair of dice. Luck and skill are deftly blended. Fans say the struggle to procure enough "votes" to become president of the United States can be absorbingly interesting.

Formerly attired in white tie and tails, General Manager Edward Johnson of the Metropolitan Opera Associates visited every singer in the last before the performances 2,000 recently at Boston Opera House. He went to say hello and to wish the artists luck. It's a custom he thought up himself and it didn't hurt the corps apart of the company a bit.

A short, snappy story with an O. Henry ending. A debonair Boston reporter, South with a ball team, got a crush on a night club entertainer in Miami. Every night he visited the club, fended her over her head, told her for a few ecstatic moments. But he never asked to see her home. Florida's a state of vast distances. His finances were low, and he didn't dare run the chance of living to taxi her 20 or 30 miles into the country.

The night he was leaving, he met her in the lobby of the modest hotel he lived at. And found, for the first time, she lived there, too!

100 Women Reduce As WPA Project

Brockton, April 3.—There's always something new under the sun—even in WPA projects! More than 100 women, from the proverbial 16 to 66, gathered at the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium today to take advantage of the WPA "General Physical Recreational Clinic." Pileting the gymnasium was Miss Virginia McGee, while Dan Creedon, former Brockton high school football star, is director of the project. Novel health-saving project was the idea of John F. Scully, superintendent of schools. According to Miss Virginia Dora, supervisor of the class, the weights of the women varied between 110 and 150. But there are expected to be lower as the class continues.

Washington, April 3 (UPI)—That place as usual on the White House lawn, she said. Asked about a recent article she wrote on the care and education of children, Mrs. Roosevelt admitted her belief that children should be brought up as "normal people." As Mrs. Roosevelt explained to her, it is "practical experience and a fair bit of judgment, and we must encourage in our own children the same things." Mrs. Roosevelt said she was wearing a new spring costume.

"It's just some straw and a few flowers," said the First Lady. It's more or less like all the other hats of this year. It has a brim and a crown—a few flowers—and the flowers shoot up in front."

Her Easter costume will be of a soft blue homespun, lighter than navy, with a three-quarter-length skirt and a short jacket.

NO EASTER PARTY

"Sister" and "Buzbee" had her grandchildren, now visiting here, are leaving on Monday, so there will be no children in the White House on Easter, and no party. The annual egg-roll will take place as usual on the White House lawn, she said.

Officially, she laughingly explained, she never does anything, though she maintains an intense interest in Democratic affairs and still has her name on the door of the New York State Committee headquarters in Manhattan.

Dear Walter:

It's great to be a winning handicapper. And I had the thrill yesterday when all my selections—four in all—came home in front.

First there was Bride's Delight in the second at Arlington, then the Vanderbilt entry of Dred and Bachelor Dinner in the fifth at Bowie. Completing the winning card were Colonel Ed in the fourth at Arlington and Venetian in the sixth at Bowie.

ANN MARSTERS BETS
$2 Win Brother Newt, Tropical 1st.
$2 Place Runamuck, Arlington 3rd.
$2 Win Story Time, Bowie 2nd.
$2 Win Lure, Bowie 5th.
$2 Win Bird Lore, Bowie 7th. (Scratched)

to bet. So here's hoping we continue and add to the Christmas Basket Fund which has already been enriched $500, also given by you.

They tell me that BROTHER

NEWT is well spotted in the first at Tropical. So I'm betting $2 to win. Over at Arlington Downs, I'm expecting a price on RUNAMUCK in the third and it's $2 to place.

At Bowie you had better watch my choices. I'm betting $2 to win on both STORY TIME in the second and UGIN in the fifth. And if BIRD LORE lives up to morning trials, I have another winner in the seventh. It's $2 to win.

That's the way I'm betting this afternoon, Walter. Five more choices and I hope five more winners.

Yours for more winners,

ANN.

FOXX WRITES ACE HANDICAPPING DAZZLES HORSEMEN

Warneke Rates
Among Great

Red Sox Now
On Improve

By JIMMY FOXX

Thomasville, Ga., April 3. MY HAT GOES OFF to Lonnie Warneke, Chicago Cubs' right-handed ace. He rates among the greatest pitchers I have ever batted against.

After facing him for the first time when we played the National League champions in our final game at Sarasota, I can easily understand his brilliant showing against the Tigers in last year's World Series.

Lon has everything. Confidence, poise and a barrel of stuff. His curve, fast ball, change of pace and control are of the best. He rarely gives a batter a "fat" ball to hit. His jerky delivery is a most deceptive one.

I collected two singles off him, but I think that was due more to luck than to ability on my part. I'm glad I don't have to face him often. If I did, I'm afraid my reputation as a slugger would suffer plenty.

In pitching nine innings against us, Lonnie went the distance for the first time this spring. We found him for 12 hits, but he held us scoreless after we had put over a run in the first inning. We bunched five hits in the last two innings, but couldn't put a run across. That's the real sign of pitching greatness, ability to bear down in the pinches.

When I saw Warneke hurt his arm and be forced to quit in the fifth game of the 1935 World Series, I feared his colorful career might be ruined. I'm glad to know he's as good as ever.

While we took it on the chin in our final appearance before our Sarasota friends, I thought we made our most impressive showing yet.

"Lefty" Grove and Johnny Welch were most effective, allowing only six hits. Our fielding was smooth and we all snapped out of our batting slump.

Ought to Even Up Today

WITH WES FERRELL PRIMED to hurl against the Cubs here today, we ought to even the count with the National League champions, who shape up strictly as the club to beat in the senior circuit race this coming season.

I still refuse to get upset over our failure to put on a sustained winning streak here. With all rivals shooting their best pitches at us, while we refuse to make any special efforts to avoid defeat, we'd have to be a lot luckier than our club figures to lead the league in triumph.

As I've said more than once, we much rather lose against good pitching in the South than to win the Grapefruit League championship at our post pitching.

I think our fans on Long or rivals are playing tight into our homes when we are losing, and against our season's starters. Well, we're not pitching all season then, we're looking at the past. As for the future, who knows this won't be of great aid to us in the coming week of the campaign, doesn't seem to me.

It usually takes me the first three weeks of the race to strike them out of the against present pitching.

We'll be off to a start. Few rivals will be as well off, none better off in this respect.

And this edge we have might well prove the determining factor in the pennant struggle.

So no matter how our followers may feel about our Florida showing, we are more than satisfied with our progress as we start our homeward journey.

Not only so, but more confident of winning the title than we were on the way, we've started five weeks ago.

CHARITY Fund on UPGRADE

COMPLIMENTS OF EXPERTS

By ANN MARSTERS
 THAT'S the way to pick them! Four winners in a row—and me holding my breath after the third one. Then—when my fourth selection, on that second day of April, came dashing down the field to win in a driving finish—well, I'm sure I could have hugged the darling horse.

You'll just have to pardon this excitement and this pride—for it isn't very often that any horse-picker can call it a clean slate for the day. And you'd be just as thrilled as I am if you happened to be riding along with me.

Walter O'Hara, for instance, is delighted—which is no wonder; considering it was his $300 in the first place. He sent me a very nice telegram as soon as he heard about my amazing luck. It reads: "I picked a winner too when I picked you to bet that charity $500—top—good luck, Ann, and congratulations." You can see I'm not pretending to be modest at the moment—because after all, maybe I won't get such an opportunity again. Yesterday was only the second day of this venture and there are many more days to go. They tell me that Luck is a fine lady—but still—she never can tell.

AIDS CHARITY

And we are not forgetting that all this betting is being done in the name of the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund. O'Hara gave the fund a gift of $500 outright. Quite apart from that gift, he contributed $500 more to me, with specific instructions that I was to play the horses with it, the winnings to go to the Basket Fund. Every win means something added to the fund.

My $500 betting stake is O'Hara's experience. He is hoping to prove to the public that, by conservative, intelligent betting, it is possible to "beat the race."

Just now, of course, hope is high. Up until last night, I'd made nine selections in this experiment—and did you realize that out of that nine, only ONE horse has run out of the money?

WIRES ARRIVE

I really ought to calm down and begin worrying about how the horses will run today. They are fairly cautious selections for me, remembering O'Hara's advice that: "If you lose your head, you'll lose your bets."

So I'm not even letting some of the telegrams I received go to my head—nevertheless I can't resist quoting a few of them to you.

From Rockingham, N. H., comes this message from Lou Smith: "Who said all horse players are broke? Congratulations. That's the best picking I've seen in years."

General Manager Allan Wilson of Suffolk Downs, wires: "Congratulations on your winning selections. Prosperity for the Christmas Basket Fund!"

And a rather flattering telegram from Dave Wilson, at Bowie: "My bets off to the best handicapper in the game. Good Luck Ann."

A FEAT, always the ambition of every handicapper, but rarely achieved—picking all winners in a set of selections, was realized yesterday by Ann Marsters, the only girl handicapper in New England. Congratulations came from everywhere and above we have four from leading turf experts.

MYSTERY KINK CRIPPLES MARCUM'S PITCHING ARM

MAY BE Out for SEASON

By JOE CASHMAN
Thomasville, Va., April 3.—As much as your enemy dislikes being an apostle of gloom, he must report today that Johnny Marcum's arm ailment is beginning to appear far more serious than was at first believed.

The week's rest, supposed to restore the right wrist of the big Kentucky hill-billy to normalcy, is now up, and Johnny is worse instead of better.

His elbow is back in a snug and arrangements have been made to have another flock of X-rays taken of the sore spot, as it is termed by the medical fraternity.

A doublet rest of a year or more is hardly expected over a right arm.

Since taken here, however, no broken bones or torn ligaments have been found, and the ailment is probably healed. Nothing can be done when there is no clue as to what should be done, as in Marcum's case.

For, from present indications, there is a chance of Marcum being able to pitch a ball on the northward trip or round into winning form before the season is at hand a month old. It's even within the realm of possibility that his services will be back to the club for the year.

And since he can get at least 15 victories from the jinxed Jimmy the Sox don't figure to come close to winning any, possibly it's better to wait and see what happens.

It was the first occasion to howl as a team. But no there is any wonder to high marks. Currie is a

Welch, Currie Lead In Mixed Doubles

Showers of praise are being bestowed on the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser, sponsors of the candlepin bowling tourney now in its fifth day at the 20th Century Alleys.

All connected with the fine sporting event, competitors, bowling alley proprietors and spectators agree unanimously that it far surpasses anything of like nature ever before attempted in these parts.

Bowling of high order has been general, a number of fast fields and the finest possible alley conditions. Of the most recent outstanding performances was the Thursday mixed doubles feat of Loreta Welch of Stone Paved's East Boston Seville alleys who paired with Stanley Currie of the Winthrop Inn. The pair rolled 105-105-105-105-105, a total of 525.

Currie, a member of the Winthrop Inn, a machine rolled in 116-116-116-116-116, a total of 584.

He came back a short time later to pair with Frank Gill of Jamaica Plain in the men's doubles, their first effort being 485, which tied them with Larry Colburne of Winthrop and Don Henderson of Saugus for first place.

Stenberg returned successive doubles strings of 108-108-108 for 324, an unusually fine combination performance.

And then Stenberg made it a great day by bowling 118-118-118 for 354 in the Clarendon All-Stars at 1:30 in the afternoon. To Joe Rubble's Rosindale Recreation five by two points, the latter leader in this division.

Two new women's doubles teams entered the picture on Thursday. Mary Young and Jeanette Kilborn of South Boston and Somerville, respectively, rolled up a formidable 518 to beat Alice Shaw and Marion Smith of Belmont with combined 553.

British 'Bike' Banning Protested

By General United States, a protest was made by the British bicycle club at the 1936 Olympic Club of Cambridge on April 19. The protest was as follows:

"Dear Sir:
"In the interests of good sportsmanship, the writer wishes to take exception to an unfortunate heading and article relative to the exclusion of British bicycles from the Bicycle Marathon by the Bicycle Club of Cambridge on April 19.

"The reasons for this exclusion appear to be in the fact that the British bicycles are faster than the domestic machines. Actually, although this may be the case, does not winning of the event, in common with every other sporting contest, depend upon the contestant rather than the machine? Is it not, therefore, unfair to penalize the boy who, in the ownership of his English machine, feels he has a cycle best suited to his needs by inferring that in order to compete he must ride a cycle which he feels will suit him less well?"

"It is our belief that the ideals of the Jefferson Club do coincide with the spirit that animates the Olympic contests and that, therefore, entrants in your event should be allowed to compete for what they are rather than for what they have."

LEWIS HANEY ON TRENDS

Sugar Decision MAY START REGIME OF Fair Competition

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)
New York, April 3.—The ruling decision of the Supreme Court against the sugar institute is very important. It shows a definite evolution in our anti-trust law, and warrants hope that a regime of fair competition will continue to be set back for American business.

The issue was argued before the court on January 11, 1935, for advance announcement of the decision. The court was divided 5-4, and (2) requiring it to be made public, and (3) without deviation, was passed by a majority of 5-4.

The gist of the case is that the sugar institute, which is a combination of producers, is unlawful, because they are engaged in a conspiracy to control the market.

It was not the announcement of the decision that was ruled against. It was the fact that the sugar institute had been in existence for so long, and that it had been successful in its efforts to control the market.

The court does not understand the sugar institute as a mere cartel, but it vigorously upholds the principle of the anti-trust acts, namely that business men should be free to compete on a level playing field.

Efforts continue to be made to show that the law is vague and indefinite. This idea is, however, as clear as day, namely that business men should be free to compete on a level playing field.

They may openly announce prices and terms in advance of sale, and enter into agreements for that purpose. They may collect and publish information about the immediate publication of prices and terms of sale.

They may cooperate fully in the establishment of a fair and competitive practice, if only to prevent transactions in a fair competition.

On the other hand, they cannot agree upon prices of their meetings. They cannot in co-operation set market prices and not make them available to buyers. They cannot at all times make basic prices and require members to adhere to them over a period of time.

The essence of this case is that nothing must be done to eliminate opportunities of competitors to make special arrangements with buyers, or to prevent transactions in a fair private negotiations are essential.

It is false to say that the decision is a blow to fair and cut-throat competition in making "quantity discounts" are lawful only where they reflect, effect, or result in a reduction to others either in direct or indirect costs. This is a sound, fair and common sense.

Some points of special interest are as follows: The court stresses the fact that the sugar institute was not organized to produce, and concludes that it was not a cartel.

It notes and stresses the fact that the sugar institute was not formed, changes in prices because of a change in the cost of production, and that the margins between raw and refined sugar are small.

The fact that 15 cents of the cost of production is absorbed in the import, and supplied 70 to 80 cents of the cost of production is considered.

PARTIAL Payments Aid TRADE PROVE WORTH IN SLUMP

INDUSTRIAL PROFITS

UP IN 1935 Big Final Quarter Helps

Earnings of 895 corporations for 1935 showed a decided increase over 1934.

Total net profits of these corporations, less deficits, last year amounted to $952,000,000, as compared with $848,000,000 for the same companies in 1934, an increase of 12 per cent.

The big final quarter helped. The fourth quarter of 1935 showed a 14 per cent increase in profits over the fourth quarter of 1934.

The National City Bank of New York reported these figures and gave the following explanation: The increase in profits is due to a number of factors, including a decline in the cost of raw materials and a decline in the cost of labor.

Eastern Gas & Fuel NET ASSET Value Shown

Eastern Gas & Fuel Corporation reported a net asset value of $1,000,000,000, a gain of 10 per cent over the same period in 1934.

The big final quarter helped. The fourth quarter of 1935 showed a 14 per cent increase in profits over the fourth quarter of 1934.

The National City Bank of New York reported these figures and gave the following explanation: The increase in profits is due to a number of factors, including a decline in the cost of raw materials and a decline in the cost of labor.

Meat Packers' Profits

Meat packers' companies should be able to show moderate profits in the five months ended March 31, particularly if processing taxes are not levied on November 1. The fiscal year ends October 31.

Including processing taxes, it is probable that income after all charges will be sufficient to cover current dividends. Without these taxes a deficiency is likely.

The industry as a whole has received a boost from the fact that the proposed windfall levy is unlikely.

During March the packers made a little profit on both beef and pork following the price upset in January and the abnormal February weather which resulted in a shortage of supplies.

With the Easter ham trade the packers always experience a pickup. This is prevailing on a moderate scale this year.

Moderate profits appear to have been met for the fiscal year, and the packers are probably well developed as a result of a leveling of values.

Some of the packers will have a good time in the second half of the year, but the packers again will depend more than normally on volume from their products.

Bar Gold London, April 3 (AP)—Bar gold advanced 1 penny to 109.75d. Sterling price equivalent to $34.84.

New England
Police StoriesPortsmouth Baker
Slain, $60 Stolen

This is the 59th in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Arthur J. Quinn, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story of "The Betraying Heel Mark."

Other stories in the series will be written by reporters whose by-lines are equally familiar throughout New England.

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

The betraying heel mark stood out, clear and distinct, against the bakery floor's dingy gray linoleum. Across the imprint, in reverse, was what appeared to be the letters "E-N-T."

It had been a rubber heel which had left the mark, very obviously, the wearer's weight having caused it to stamp its likeness on the floor, like a rubber stamp from a child's toy printing set might reproduce itself in red ink on a sheet of paper.

It hadn't been red ink, however, which had moistened the heel to produce this imprint.

It had been the blood of a bread-maker, Joseph Trudeau, who was lying murdered in a rear room of the shop in which he was employed at Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

Trudeau's skull had been crushed by a savage shower of blows which had torn his scalp and had broken his nose, his teeth, his mouth, apparently to serve as a gag, had been jammed a wooden floor jack.

Forward pieces of his clothing were still inside out, as the rubber-soled shoe had left them.

Surviving the scene of the crime, City Marshal George H. Ducker had been obliged to reconstruct the details.

It seemed plain Trudeau's assailant had entered the front shop of the bakery when Trudeau was standing behind a counter.

Behind the counter was a half-mooned clear of the smoke which Trudeau was accustomed to buy.

Signs of Struggle

On the floor of the shop, well in front of the counter, however, were Trudeau's feet, both and gloves.

There was blood here, too, and signs of a desperate struggle.

Apparently, the murderer had been intent on robbery, only had caught Trudeau out from behind the counter, on the product of an attempt.

There had been no chance for a freewheeling blow, as the assailant, the killer had to subdue his victim in a hotbed as brutal as it had been cunning.

Wielding some sort of a heavy weapon, the intruder had struck Trudeau down, had heavily after his groin, then had dragged him, bleeding and unconscious, to the wrapping room at the rear of the shop.

It was in this wrapping room that the body was discovered.

At first, the body had been found, and had been taken to the morgue, but he had not been seen there.

City Marshal Ducker, who knew the layout of the shop, had been told that Trudeau had been slain by a criminal.

The instrument, Ducker thought, might have been a hammer, a piece of pipe, wrapped in a padding of cloth, or it might have been a leather "wrap-around" filled with nails.

Whatever the weapon had been, was missing when police arrived.

Heel-Print Clue

Only visible clue to the possible identity of the killer was the single heel-print.

Trudeau's assailant, it appeared, had been deliberate in his attempt to keep from stepping in the largest and most conspicuous blood-stain on the floor.

One of the smaller stains, however, he had failed to avoid. He had left a single heel-print on his rubber shoe, a fine line that had been transferred, in the line of the linoleum, as he had stepped on it.

Trudeau's body, he was told, had been left that afternoon.

Neither had it been seen since, when the officers had arrived, the bloodstains on the floor were already dry.

It wasn't possible that an innocent person had slipped under the bakery door locked and the light out.

First to realize that a crime must have been done was Assistant Willett, Trudeau's assistant on the night shift in the oven.

Willett came to the bakery soon after 10 o'clock, on the night shift, Sunday, Feb. 1, 1935.

At that time, he thought, he should have had under way the batch of new bread for Monday morning distribution. The dough should have been kneaded and ready for the press, the oven should have been fired, the little shop warm and alive with light.

Instead, the bakery building on Daniel street was in darkness. The door was locked, no light, no hammering and shouting, could get a reply.

Finally victorious in their fight to save Sidney Thorpe from the gallows were these two loyal relatives, his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Thorpe of Biddeford, Me., and his younger brother, John Thorpe.

With a $200 noose bought and invitations out for the hanging, Sidney Thorpe was spared when New Hampshire Governor Willett commuted Thorpe's sentence to life imprisonment.

Thorpe was found guilty of the slaying of Portsmouth baker, Joseph Trudeau, Thorpe's counsel, Stewart E. Rowe, still thinks him innocent.

where the bakery was located. I didn't think anything of it, and I probably told him it was on Daniel street.

"Have you ever seen that young fellow before or since?" inquired City Marshal Ducker.

"Oh, yes," the girl said, "that fellow comes in here every week or two. I think he goes back and forth on the house. Some of the boys had something about him being in Maine. And I have an idea he has a girl named Rose, too somewhere."

"What kind of a looking fellow was he?"

"Well, he's sort of stocky and light-skinned," the waitress recalled. "He wears glasses, too. 'We've got your own suits and will watch him and let's go here."

The waitress shook her head. "I think he's not been working lately. He has seemed sort of nervous."

"Mum!" City Marshal Ducker was remembering something. "He was a character of a person, but I don't know who he was. I believe it might be Thorpe. I heard this fellow talk himself up."

City Marshal Ducker was getting into a fever, he told himself. He heard about a young fellow named Thorpe, and it hadn't been long ago, either.

Finally victorious in their fight to save Sidney Thorpe from the gallows were these two loyal relatives, his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Thorpe of Biddeford, Me., and his younger brother, John Thorpe.

With a $200 noose bought and invitations out for the hanging, Sidney Thorpe was spared when New Hampshire Governor Willett commuted Thorpe's sentence to life imprisonment.

Thorpe was found guilty of the slaying of Portsmouth baker, Joseph Trudeau, Thorpe's counsel, Stewart E. Rowe, still thinks him innocent.

where the bakery was located. I didn't think anything of it, and I probably told him it was on Daniel street.

"Have you ever seen that young fellow before or since?" inquired City Marshal Ducker.

"Oh, yes," the girl said, "that fellow comes in here every week or two. I think he goes back and forth on the house. Some of the boys had something about him being in Maine. And I have an idea he has a girl named Rose, too somewhere."

"What kind of a looking fellow was he?"

"Well, he's sort of stocky and light-skinned," the waitress recalled. "He wears glasses, too. 'We've got your own suits and will watch him and let's go here."

The waitress shook her head. "I think he's not been working lately. He has seemed sort of nervous."

"Mum!" City Marshal Ducker was remembering something. "He was a character of a person, but I don't know who he was. I believe it might be Thorpe. I heard this fellow talk himself up."

City Marshal Ducker was getting into a fever, he told himself. He heard about a young fellow named Thorpe, and it hadn't been long ago, either.

Now, he was remembering something. "He was a character of a person, but I don't know who he was. I believe it might be Thorpe. I heard this fellow talk himself up."
